New Jersey cranberry production steady

TRENTON, NJ – Cranberry growers expect to produce 580 thousand barrels in 2024, according to Bruce Eklund, state statistician of the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service, New Jersey Field Office. This would match last year's production.

Massachusetts production is forecast at 2.20 million barrels, up from 1.97 million barrels the year before. Oregon producers expect to harvest 560 thousand barrels, up from 550 thousand barrels in 2023. Wisconsin production is forecast at 4.9 million barrels, down from 2023 production of 5.01 million barrels. Total forecast for these four states is 8.24 million barrels compared to a realized 8.11 million barrels in 2023.

For more detail including acreage and value of production, USDA's National Agricultural Statistics released the 2023 Non-citrus Fruit and Nut Final Summary May 7, 2024 at:
